Made from reclaimed local barn wood and a crazy assortment of other repurposed stuff, Tony DiPietro's birdhouses are truly for the birds. "They're not just decorative," he notes. "The hole is the right size, and they're all built for nesting. Each one has a door so you can clean it out, too." DiPietro's quirky style attracts flocks of bird lovers: Houses might feature a vintage faucet, funnel, or hammer. He roofs his mini mansions with fence pickets, shutters, rusty metal, or an old license plate. "My grandpa made things out of nothing. I guess that rubbed off on me," he says.

- About $39-$89 per birdhouse
